

A wonderful evening was had on Saturday 16th September when Voices of Exmoor took to the stage in Dulverton Town Hall.

It was such a joyous and, at times, emotional event, as the choir performed their Woolhanger the Reprise concert, following the highly successful show which they performed for the very first time at Woolhanger Estate in September of last year.

The performance included many of my favourite songs - the beautiful and touching Seal Lullaby, by Eric Whitacre and Rudyard Kipling, sung with such sensitivity and grace. Their wonderful and uplifting rendition of the music of MGM, is always one to get my toes tapping and my shoulders swaying, much to the annoyance of the person sat behind me, I'm sure!

With delightful humour from their musical director Amanda Taylor and beautiful music from accomplished pianist Joke Routledge, assisted by Arwen Lewis on the recorder for two songs, it was most definitely another successful concert from the Voices of Exmoor and one that I'd happily attend again. I am very much looking forward to their Christmas concert in Dulverton on December 9th.
